

Go There Now!: A Boomers Guide to Budget Travel

TURN ON! TUNE IN! DROP OUT! Turn on your ear phones or your hearing aid, tune in your favorite oldies stations, and drop out of sight for a while to read a great book! Learn how you can finally see the world without spending a fortune. Face it-Sixty really is the New Forty and its never too late to take on new challenges, especially for the boomer generation. This book will put you on the road again with a virtual hassle-free tour of the ins and outs of international backpacking and touring. Neither a travel memoir nor a destination-specific guide, this book will send you off the beaten package-tour path by scoping out every detail with loads of sensible, practical and groovy advice from a pro-traveler and fellow boomer. So get with the program and GO THERE NOW! ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Don Stewart is one of the oldest baby boomers, born nine months after the end of the Second World War. He holds a B.A. from Ottawas Carleton University. His career included teaching, magazine editing, and communications consulting for major corporations. For 20 years he ran a small business. Don lives in the hills north of Montreal with his wife and two sons and participates in many aspects of small town life, from local politics to community theater and regional history. After an early retirement, he embarked on a series of remarkable travel adventures that have taken him to many parts of the world

Nevertheless, there he was taking 22 different budget airline flights earlier The books, originally pitched toward the young baby boomer In any case, the travel guide industry has matured, he said.
