Candace Summers was a woman of excellence. She spent nineteen years of her life trying to become everything her father was. When her father died, Candace's life turned upside down. A young woman who once devoted her life to God and her parents, now found herself caught up in lies and deceit. Every thing that Candace once loved was becoming very difficult for her to keep. Her friendship, her faith, her husband and her career were all becoming hard for her to stay committed to. Candace wanted to live her life being free, and making up for all that she had missed out on in her youth. Her walls finally closed in on her, once she decided that she was heading in the wrong direction. When her wall opens up and begins to talk, who will she be able to count on?
